GARBAGE CREMATORY GOES

The Commissioners Say the Malodorous Plant Cannot Remain.

Makes No Difference, They Say, Whether It Is Sanitary or Not, If It Is a Nuisance.

The Commissioners have held another board meeting regarding the disposition of the District garbage, in which Inventor Smith, of the Smith crematory, appeared before them to urge the retention of his plant, but at the close of a long discussion the board decided to adhere to its former decision, that is, that the crematory back of the old observatory must be abandoned as soon as possible.

Mr. Smith contended that his crematory had not had a thorough test. Among other things, he claimed that the holes in the crematory were round while the carts were square, and that in dumping some of the garbage was left on the outside, thus creating the offensive smell which had been complained of.

Commissioner Wright, however, replied that he had visited the crematory and had seen the garbage put into the furnace, and he was certain that none of the odors escaped in this process.

Mr. Smith then proceeded to argue that however much odors might escape from his plant, it was far from unsanitary, and started to prove it, but the Commissioners objected that they did not care to be proved that the crematory was sanitary or otherwise. The fact remained that the citizens in the neighborhood of the plant were complaining very bitterly against the odor being allowed to burn garbage there, and this was sufficient for them to order its removal.

Health Officer Woodward, who was called in to hear Mr. Smith's claims, concurred in this decision, but was also firmly convinced that the odors in themselves are injurious to health.

Garbage Contractor Warfield was also present at the hearing, as, if the crematory were decided to allow the crematory to continue, it would be necessary for him to submit a written proposition regarding other means of disposing of the city refuse, as he had on a former interview with Commissioner Wright agreed to do. As, however, it is now finally decided that the crematory must be discontinued, Mr. Warfield will proceed to perfect the details of the plan, which, he says, will be submitted in a few days.

In speaking about the matter to a Times reporter he said that the outline of his scheme, as presented to the daily papers, was the most correct, but that it had not as yet fully determined upon the minor details. In particular he has not yet fixed upon a proper site for his down-the-river plant.

The Commissioners did not fix any time limit to their order directing that the plant be abandoned, merely stipulating that it must be as soon as possible. As Mr. Smith, however, erected the crematory and offered its use to the contractor subject to the endorsement of the Commissioners, it is highly probable that he will refuse to allow its further use, in which event the substitute plan will have to be put in working order very speedily.

SUBMARINE BOAT'S TRIAL

The Holland's Surface Test Proves an Unqualified Success.

Elizabethport, N. J., June 26.—The Holland submarine boat, in its first trial today at the Nixon shipyard as a free and self-moving craft. The trial was altogether a surface test. It showed that the Holland's delicate internal propelling and steering mechanism works with unexceptional smoothness. It showed that while the queer under-water boat was on the surface she was instantly obedient to the tiny steering lever in the conning tower, and finally it showed that the Holland will, in all probability, attain a speed far greater than that which her inventor here has intended to require of her.

Under one-fifth power she steamed straight away for a measured half mile, covering the distance in three minutes, or at the rate of ten miles an hour, indicating that she will probably attain a speed of between twenty and thirty knots under full power. The new lightness tender Mangrove was launched here today, and the crowd which came to that ceremony saw also the surface trial of the Holland.

WOMAN CATCHER CHAPMAN

His Methods Reversed in a New York Police Court.

VICTIMS ALLOWED TO GO FREE

The Police Captain of Seelye Dinner Fume Again in Notoriety Through Making Alleged Illegal Arrests—Respectable Working Women Hauled Into Court.

New York, June 26.—Police Commissioner Moss sat with Magistrate Meade on the bench of Jefferson Market court today and watched the arraignment of the women whom Capt. Chapman's men captured in the Tenderloin last night.

Commissioner Moss whispered long and earnestly with the magistrate and two women were discharged before his eyes. It is said that the visit of the police commissioner was to enable him to see for himself the result of Chapman's raid, and that some interesting developments may follow.

Capt. Chapman and his methods received another blow in the court today in the discharge of more women, whose men had been arrested.

The czar of the Tenderloin was in no amiable mood today, and was denouncing in no measured terms those who had publicly criticized his actions in dragging women to the police station.

"People who have been in glass houses had better not throw stones," quoted the captain. "I know more about some of these people that are roasting me than will be good for them if I make it known and come back at them."

The captain was scoring everybody, and it was evident that the numerous criticisms which come to his ears daily were having some effect on him. This effect was evinced also in the small number of arrests made in the Tenderloin last night.

Some of the policemen whose duty it has been to promenade Broadway and Sixth avenue and speak to every unaccompanied woman who was placed on regular patrol duty again last night, and only a few "women catchers" were out. They brought in four.

One of these was Mrs. Georgiana Duprez, of No. 240 West Fortieth street. She had been arrested by Policeman Charles A. Helms, who has been out of Chapman's right hand men in his Tenderloin crusade. Helms, like Policeman Lensebee, is extremely youthful for a policeman.

The woman was sobbing when brought to the bar. She said she was married and worked in a bakery in order to help support her family. She had been out late at the bakery and was returning home late, she said, when the policeman came up to her and spoke to her. She answered him, half afraid, she said, and then he arrested her.

"Have you ever arrested this woman before?" asked Magistrate Meade of Helms.

"No," said Helms.

"Do you know whether she has ever been arrested before?"

"Then there is absolutely no evidence here against her. She is discharged."

The woman left for courtroom crying. Police Commissioner Moss had come in and had seated himself by the magistrate. The magistrate and the commissioner, after the woman was discharged, held a long and earnest conversation in whispers.

Another woman, a victim of Chapman, was brought up.

She was Louise Ribot, twenty-one years old, of No. 222 West Thirty-eighth street. She had been arrested by Policeman Charles H. Haussler, who accused her of accosting him at Seventh avenue and Thirty-ninth street.

"She is a woman of bad character, your honor," said Haussler.

"Have you ever arrested her before?"

"No, sir."

"Can you positively swear that she has been arrested before?"

"No, sir."

"Then you do not know she is a bad woman?" said the magistrate, sternly.

"Well, I have seen her walking up and down the street several times," lamely answered Haussler, "and—"

"Discharged!" interrupted the magistrate, an expression of disgust on his face.

Commissioner Moss then left the courtroom. It developed that when Louise Ribot was arrested last night, that William R. Neely, of No. 201 West Twenty-fourth street, saw the arrest and indignantly protested.

The policeman arrested him, too, and took him to the station for interfering.

Lizzie Jackson, No. 327 West Fortieth street, who was also arrested by Chapman's men, was fined $3. She said she thought the policeman was drunk, and she spoke to him "just for fun."

THE ROYAL CRESCENT.

An Invitation Extended to Meet in Washington Next Year.

The Supreme Lodge of the Royal Crescent held its biennial session at the American Hotel, Boston, Mass., Tuesday, June 15. Much business of importance to the order was transacted, changing from biennial to annual sessions, election and installation of officers, appointing committees, reports of officers and committees.

An invitation to hold the next session at Washington, D. C., was referred to the committee on laws.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Supreme president, Henry C. Knight, of Boston, Mass.; supreme vice president, Louis Lisle, of Boston, Mass.; supreme secretary, Joseph Sear, of Boston, Mass.; supreme treasurer, P. F. Daniels, of Waltham, Mass.; supreme supervisor, T. P. Mitchell, of Haverhill, Mass.; supreme medical examiner, F. A. Foster, of Waltham, Mass.; supreme councillor, L. J. Drake, esq., of Boston, Mass.; supreme judge, Mrs. M. E. Butler, of Washington, D. C.; supreme marshal, Mrs. M. Johnson, of Washington, D. C.; supreme guard, C. C. Cross, of Meriden, Conn.; supreme trustee, W. E. Martin, of Haverhill, Mass.; Joseph Harper, of Washington, D. C., and Fred S. Howard, of Haverhill, Mass.

Committee on laws—W. G. Perry, of Washington, D. C.; E. L. Jackson, of Waltham, Mass., and P. J. Meehan, of Washington, D. C. Committee on finance, F. E. Debecker, of Boston, Mass.; H. P. Butler, of Boston, Mass., and S. E. Hatchelder, of Haverhill, Mass.

"In the face of impending danger, when the black cloud of ruin hovered over us, there was no symptom of fear, no desertion of the colors, but, instead, every soldier stood firm, every man showed courage and undaunted courage, even when it became evident that the superb organization, our pride and joy for more than fourteen years, must pass out of existence."

"To you, a chief of unexcelled justice and generosity, friend to stand and true that we were bound to you by bonds of steel, and who, through many years of fierce contest, bore aloft our oriflamme, we are proud to say we gave the fullest degree of loyalty."

"At the severance of our business relations, we ask you to accept in addition to this tribute of esteem, our sincere expression of affection, and our loving wish that your cup of happiness may be overflowing to the end of your days."

Owing to the changes of the addresses of the subscribers to the testimonial, Mr. Phillips was unable to reply to each individually, and he therefore sent the following letter to the general managers of the divisional offices at New York, Chicago and Washington:

"New York, June 8, 1897.
"To Mr. P. V. DeGraw and others, late in the service of the United Press.
"Gentlemen—Through your spokesman, Mr. E. A. B. Tobey, I was recently presented with a silver loving cup of beautiful design and exquisite finish, together with a flattering testimonial, to which was appended the names of all most every person who was formerly with the United Press."

"To all who united in giving these glowing expressions of their friendship and good will, permit me to say that I appreciate the compliment implied, and that I shall always hold both the cup and the written testimonial among my most cherished possessions."

"Wish you all the success, prosperity and happiness imaginable. Very truly yours, WALTER P. PHILLIPS."

Married on Sight.
Lexington, Ky., June 26.—Charles A. Hull, manager of and a director in the Manhattan Mines, near Denver, and Miss Julia Dooley, of this county, were married today by a brother of Miss Dooley, and the bride was taken to her home for the first time last night. A correspondence was begun between Mr. Hull and Miss Dooley two years ago. They exchanged photographs, and were to have been married last September, when Hull was called to Mexico on a business trip. He was met here by a brother of Miss Dooley, and drove to her home, near Athens. The bride is about seventeen years old.

Warships' Summer Evolutions.

Dr. Harrison's Lost Cash.
To the Editor of the Times:
I wish to correct the impression made by The Morning Times concerning my losing $35. I did lose $30. I attach no blame to any particular person or persons and certainly not to Messrs. Lawson and Hart. My money was at the place spoken of in The Times and no one knew of its hiding place except W. A. Strander, who was my particular friend. Besides, I was not induced to stop at the house on any representations of the above gentlemen, but as a matter of convenience to myself. It is in justice to my friends. Very sincerely,
Dr. W. H. BARRISON.

ECHOES OF THE BOAT RACE

A Decisive Test of Home Against Imported Methods.

The Victorious Crew the Only Representative of the Purely American Style.

Poughkeepsie, June 26.—The principal street of this town had a very 5th of July look about its gutters this morning. Remnants of firecrackers and roman candles and other things, when loaded, are the implements used to celebrate victory, were scattered about everywhere. A few young men were in sight, but they were either hurrying to the railroad station or searching for drug stores where they could find some antidote for a very "woozy" taste or splitting head. They wore, too, far-away looking faces, with expressions on them of a more pained nature than those of the losers yesterday.

The human creature who drew here and the sailor who passed the night under a Poughkeepsie roof heard none enough after midnight to ruin the best set of nerves going.

There was a compensating advantage, however. One is out of the swim here if he does not keep cheerful. All children in Poughkeepsie are rowers, and their habits of early rising and boasting of that fact immediately to be made has deprived many a sojourner of needed rest.

The celebration last night and this morning played the ducks with the rowers, they missed their usual rest, and the probability is that they, too, have headaches. A rower's head is so small that a good-sized pain must hurt him dreadfully.

Seriously, Cornell this morning: those herself a true rowing champion. More than that, she won with the real American stroke, in an American boat, and signed the names of the victorious crew. Bob Cook's English gods proved false to him. Mr. Lehmann did not bring with him a very superior quality of divinity either. Now there opens up to the theans a vista as easy enough to turn the composite head of any university in America. If they shall take advantage of the opportunity Yale announced when she consented to make a triangular race of it that, win or lose, it was her last appearance with Cornell. She may change her tune, and she probably has changed it. If not, there is nothing to prevent Cornell from making an entire invasion of English waters next year, and winning the great event at Henley possibly.

Cornell's past experience, her position as the foremost representative of distinctive American rowing, would make a contest in England where she was a factor in the world's rowing, and the probability of her success in the English and American strokes.

Nothing has been said to indicate any such intention on Cornell's part, but this is the logical course for her to pursue in view of her former defeat in England, and her two successive victories in Poughkeepsie since her return.

Fireworks and music and cheers marked the late celebration. There was almost no display of ingenuity or precocity in the manner which the undergraduates of Cornell left off their enthusiasm. It was all as simple as the beating of a drum. They enjoyed it all, but to the spectators it was tame. There was nothing that appealed to an outsider's sense of humor. A sense of justice was simply appeased in the retaliatory attacks on the rowers.

Yale's sudden retreat from the scene of battle was characteristic. This course is one she has always followed in victory or defeat. When her crews have won at New London, or her eleven at Springfield, or her nine at Hartford, her cohorts have always rushed away to New Haven, there to be the celebrating on the home grounds.

Yale's was, therefore, an unpopular with local shopkeepers. Harvard celebrates where her victories are won, and so does Cornell. But Harvard is very shy on celebrations during the last decade.

The weather and water conditions yesterday were much perfect. Barring the acidity which characterized the running of the observation train, all went well. But that one piece of stupidity sent a million curses floating up to heaven.

Next week's races between the "varity" and freshmen crews of Cornell, Pennsylvania and Columbia are very much on the tail of the late order. It does not seem possible that Cornell can fail to win her "varity" race as she pleases. But then there is always an element of chance in boating, and there is strength, snap and spirit in Pennsylvania's rowing.

MUSIC TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

A New Constitution Considered and Officers Elected.

New York, June 26.—Two thousand persons attended the session of the Music Teachers' national convention today and interest is increasing with every meeting.

A business session was held in the concert hall of the Grand Central Place, where a new constitution was considered. In the Lyceum a conference on methods and results in music schools was held.

At the general business meeting Prof. G. C. Gow, of Vassar College, read the new constitution.

The committee of vice presidents recommended Greater New York as the place of next year's convention.

The following nominations were made to be acted on by the general convention on Monday:

For president, H. W. Greene (renomination), New York; for secretary, James P. Keogh, New York; for treasurer, Charles W. Landon, Lynn, Mass.

COWBOYS' NARROW ESCAPE.

Phoenix, Ariz., June 26.—A party of cowboys made a formidable discovery in the Superstition Mountains. While some forty of them were hunting for lost cattle, they went into a canyon, which it was thought was never before visited by a human being.

They discovered a herd of wild cattle to the number of about 100. The cowboys attempted to drive a portion of them out, but the animals turned upon them, killing several of their horses and escaping up the canyon. A party is being organized to return to the canyon and slaughter the animals.

A Bike Affair.

She (as he finishes mending her tire)—Oh, thank you so much! What would I have done without you?
He—Don't mention it. I wish I could always carry the repair kit for you. (Tenderly) May I, Eleanor?

And, a small boy, was bitten by a dog belonging to Francis H. Lingner.
